HUNTER BROTHERS REMAIN ALOFT ON TWENTIETH DAY

Continue to Add Hours to Refueling Endurance
Record

49 HOURS TO RECORD

Two Fliers Eat and Sleep
Whenever Possible; Engine Going Good

SKY HARBOR AIRPORT, Chicago, July 1.—(INS)—The endurance plane, City of Chicago, piloted by the brothers John and Kenneth Hunter, dived on today steadily adding hours to the new refueling endurance record.

The Stinson-Detroit hovered above the airport awaiting its first refueling of the day. At 6.40 a. m. (E. S. T.) today the fliers had been aloft for 47 hours, adding 49 hours to the old world record.

"Which will break first—the men or the plane?"

The "City of Chicago" has received only cursory attention during the fight—and this mainly in greasing the motor. The usual care of struts, wires and mountings has been neglected—cast aside by the importance of the refueling.

On most airlines, it was pointed out, motors are checked for repairs after every fifty hours of flying time; after the 200-hour mark they are completely overhauled. Other parts of the planes receive the same care.

With a new romance of the skies—"five hundred hours aloft"—only one day away, the sleeping situation is becoming acute.

The two brothers—John and Kenneth—sleep whenever they feel like it—whether for a few minutes or a few hours. They eat the same way—everything irregular—if they are hungry they gorge; if not they nibble. "How long can this last?" those on the ground ask.

If all goes well aboard the "City of Chicago," the 500-hour mark will be reached at 1.40 p. m. (Philadelphia time) tomorrow. The brothers vow, however, they will do their skyrocketing in the sky on the Fourth of July; they said last night they were not coming down until their Stinson-Detroit monoplane gives up.

Walter and Albert Hunter, the crew of the refueling plane, "Big Ben," said they thought their brothers would stay up until Saturday, at least.

Kenneth Hunter, the wing-walker on the Hunter brothers' barnstorming tour of yore, was faced with a perilous task today to avoid a possible accident to the rudder, in the many refuelings, papers and strings have been torn from the end of the rope lowered from the "Big Ben" and blown aft, collecting about the rudder and stabilizer. Last night, Kenneth said he would crawl along the fuselage sometime today and remove the paper. He added he would wear no parachute because it would hamper his movements.

Dale Jackson, who with Forest O'Brien set the old record of 420.21.30 in the "St. Louis Robin," flew to Chicago yesterday and planned to go aloft today to drop a victory wreath onto the wings of the "City of Chicago."

NEW PLAN TO DRY THE UNITED STATES NOW ON

Prohibition Bureau Begins To Function Under Mitchell

WORK STARTED TODAY

By Robert S. Thornburgh
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Uncle Sam's newest plan for drying up the United States got away to a flying start when the government opened for business at 9 a. m. today.

The Prohibition Bureau began to function under the direction of Attorney-General Mitchell, instead of Secretary Mellon, though the latter retained the Industrial Alcohol Bureau, the Coast Guard and the Customs Service, the latter being charged with the prevention of smuggling.

Col. Amos W. Woodcock, until yesterday United States Attorney at Baltimore, the new director of prohibition, had nothing to say definitely about his plans other than the conventional statement that he "intended to enforce the law."

All officials seemed to believe the new arrangement will bring about an improvement because the district deputy administrator will be in close touch with the United States attorneys, the offices of the latter having a big voice in enforcement activities.

The fact that frequently the United States attorneys have appealed to the prohibition bureau to make only important cases where there appeared a good chance for convictions, because of serious congestions in courts, indicated the new regime will not ask for as many indictments for violations of the dry laws, but will be able to get a bigger percentage of convictions.

Anthony Tilotta Buried From Aunt's Residence

Anthony Tilotta, only son of the late John Tilotta, who was so severely beaten on the night of December 29, 1928, that he died later in the Harriman Hospital, was buried here yesterday afternoon.

Anthony was drowned while swimming in the Schuylkill river at Philadelphia Friday afternoon. He was an inmate of the Northern Home for Friendless Children, 5300 Ridge avenue, Philadelphia. The lad's mother is serving a life term in the Eastern Penitentiary for having plotted the death of her husband here.

The body of the youngster was brought to Bristol to the home of his aunt, Mrs. Martina, 1025 Elm street. A rumor had spread through Bristol to the effect that Mrs. Tilotta was to be brought from jail to view the body of her son. A large crowd of curious gathered in the vicinity of the Martina residence and along the route of the funeral to St. Ann's church.

Funeral services were held at two o'clock in St. Ann's church and six boys from the home where Anthony was an inmate acted as pall bearers. They were accompanied by the superintendent of the home. Burial was made in St. Mark's Cemetery.

Mrs. Tilotta was not permitted to come to Bristol.

The blaze was on the third floor but the damage done was only slight. The origin has not been determined.

HERE AND THERE THRUOUT BUCKS COUNTY

Several Thousand People Attend Lawn Fete at Grand View Hospital — Perkasio Youth Suffers Heart Attack and Drowns While Swimming — New Galena Hotel Raided — Nearly 10,000 Jam Forest Park, Chalfont, When Philadelphia Sunday Schools Picnic.

Nearly 4,000 people participated in the annual lawn fete and dinner at Grand View Hospital, Sellersville, on Saturday afternoon, in one of the largest fashionable gatherings of the year in Bucks county.

People were present from all the surrounding country, many from Philadelphia. Nearly 2,000 sat down to the open-air banquet that was served on the lawn in the last hours of a busy day.

A dozen booths, conducted by the ladies' auxiliaries of the American Legion posts of all the towns along the North Penn valley, were centers of activity, selling linen, candies and ice cream, fancy work and other novelties.

A brilliant program was the feature of the afternoon when Dr. Gilbert Condit, a prominent Philadelphian, was the guest of honor and speaker of the day.

He told of the work of the hospital and its growth, saying that the presence of the institution meant to the surrounding country.

"The people of Bucks county owe a great debt to the hospital here, and the hospital itself owes a great debt to these self-sacrificing girls who have followed one of the noblest professions, that of service as nurses."

"Success has greeted your efforts so far, and even greater success awaits you in the future," Dr. Condit told the authorities of the hospital and the audience of several hundred that surrounded the platform on the lawn.

A full program followed his speech, in which the Boys' Harmonica Band, of the York Avenue School, of Lansdale, took part, playing several numbers under the leadership of Paul L. Brandt, principal of the school and organizer of the band.

Two members of the Perkasio Boys' Band, Edward Moyer, of Silverdale, and Fritz Kemmerer, of Sellersville, favored with an unusual selection, a trumpet duet, after which the entire band gave a concert.

The Quakertown Band, one of the oldest musical organizations in this part of the country, also presented an interesting program, and the chorus of the Women's Club of Perkasio, numbering nearly twenty voices, gave several renditions.

The two bands continued with selections for the remainder of the afternoon, while the visitors patronized the booths and strolled about the picturesque grounds of the hospital.

Promptly at five o'clock the first covers of dinner were placed upon the tables, about two hundred people being served at a time. The dinner continued until nearly dark, when it was estimated that something over a thousand persons had eaten.

Howard Horning, sixteen-year-old son of Joseph Horning, of 18 South Eighth street, Perkasio, suffered a heart attack while swimming in the Perkiomen Creek, at Memorial Park, Schwenksville, Sunday afternoon, and died before rescuers could reach him.

The boy's death brought a happy family outing to a sad close. Members of the family were nearby watching the boy swim when he suddenly disappeared under water. His body failed to come to the surface.

Several bathers began diving for the body and it was recovered fifteen minutes later as several hundred persons lined the banks of the creek. A Schwenksville physician was hastily summoned, but the boy could not be revived.

For the ninth time since the enactment of the dry laws, and the fourth time in the regime of the present owner, the New Galena Hotel was raided on Saturday afternoon, and a quantity of alleged illicit liquor confiscated.

The proprietor of the place, Charles Zglincki, out of jail only five days after a sentence on a similar charge, is now back in the Bucks County Prison, Doylestown, in default of bail.

The raid was made after several complaints to the State Police that Zglincki was selling liquor. Police of the Doylestown detail made the raid.

A half-barrel of alleged high powered beer was taken in the raid and Zglincki himself, who was in the place at the time, was placed under arrest.

He was taken before Magistrate W. Carlisle Hobensack, of Doylestown, who set his bail at $1,000 to await the action of the grand jury. Zglincki was unable to raise the bail, and was incarcerated in the Bucks county jail.

This is the fourth time that he has undergone the same experience, the hotel having been raided three times (Continued on Page 4)

BARRETT'S STICK WORK FEATURE OF CONTEST

Bristol Star Also Excels in the Field, Holding On To Three Hard Hits

FINAL SCORE IS 5 TO 2

Schedule For Tonight
CROYDON vs. EMILIE
(At Emille)

Result of Last Night
Federals, 5; Independents, 2

By T. M. Juno

Paul Barrett's playing was the feature of the game played on St. Ann's field last night when the Federals downed the Independents, 5-2.

Barrett, playing left field for the winners, had a perfect day with the stick, hitting two singles and a triple and being hit with a pitched ball. In the field he held on to three hard hit flies, catching one after he had completely misjudged it. He also pegged out a main trying to score from second base on a hit to his garden. Barrett's three-bagger was an ordinary one base blow. The hit fell behind third base and was chased by Avella, Cochrane and Hibbs. Barrett rounded first and continued to second and while the throw-in was on its way to the keystone sack, he suddenly made a dash to third base which was uncovered. It was the best piece of base running seen in the league this season.

Besides Barrett, Larry David also had a 1,000 average for the night. He had a walk, double, and single in three trips to the platter.

The Independents played a fine brand of ball but did not come through in the pinches. Another cause for their defeat is too much wild base running. In all four runners were nipped off the sacks. One was caught off with the bases crowded and a hit would have meant at least two more tallies.

Four batters were struck with pitched balls during the seven frames of ball playing. Kohler hit Barrett and DeRisi, and DeRisi hit Kohler and G. Avella.

Lasprella was the hitting star of the losers, getting a double and single in three tries. He also reached first the third time via Cochrane's error.

Both teams scored two runs in the first frame. For the Federals, Cooper grounded out to second; Brooks hit to Kohler and was out; Barrett rolled to the left of Kohler and beat out the ball for a hit; Barrett stole second and continued to third on Morrell's bad throw to second; Barrett scored on a passed ball; Dietrich singled to left and scored on David's double; Riola was safe when Romeo failed to hold F. Hibbs' throw; Cochrane rolled out.

For the Independents, Morrell struck out; Cochrane grounded out; F. Hibbs singled over short; G. Avella was passed; Lasprella doubled to left, scoring both runners but was out himself when he overran second base, Wilkinson to M. Cochrane.

The Federals counted twice again in the fourth. David was passed and went to second on a passed ball; Riola lined to Kohler; Cochrane singled to left, scoring David; Cochrane counted on Wilkinson's double to the left garden; DeRisi struck out and Wilkinson was caught off second, Kohler to F. Hibbs.

The last run of the game was scored in the Federals' last inning. With one out, DeRisi was hit with a pitched ball; Cooper beat out a hit (Continued on Page 4)

GAME WAS REPLAYED

"Dave" Landreth, president of the Bristol Twilight League, last night announced that the protest of the Croydon Boys' Club against the Federals was not allowed.

The manager of the Croydon club claimed that Manager Mulholland, of the Federals released Arthur Brooks during the game and then allowed the player to enter the game in the last inning.

GAS TAX OFF ONE CENT; EFFECTIVE AT MIDNIGHT

Drop Takes Place Automatically Under Action of The Last Legislature

GAS CHEAPER IN U. S.

HARRISBURG, July 1.—Owners and operators of motor vehicles should not forget that at midnight the State's gasoline tax automatically reduced one cent per gallon, Commissioner Benjamin G. Eynon of the Motor Vehicles Bureau advised today.

"No special order is necessary to bring about this result," Commissioner Eynon said. "The law which increased the rate per gallon to four cents provided also that the tax return to three cents on July 1, 1930."

"It is possible that here and there a gasoline vendor may overlook the law's provision; therefore owners and operators of cars and trucks should be on the alert. So far as is possible the Motor Vehicles Bureau will notify dealers of the change in rate."

The three-cent rate places Pennsylvania in the class with California, Delaware, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota and Washington, all of which levy a three-cent tax.

Pennsylvania inaugurated its gasoline tax in 1921. In that year twelve American states levied a one-cent tax, which Oregon increased its two-year-old levy of a cent to two cents. Colorado, Oregon and North Dakota placed a penny tax per gallon in 1929. Colorado's tax is now four cents, Oregon's four and North Dakota three. Every American state now collects a gasoline tax, the rate in Florida being six cents per gallon. The cent-tax long ago disappeared.

"The last quarter of 1929," said Commissioner Eynon, "the average gasoline charge in fifty American cities was 21.2 cents per gallon. Now where else on the globe was it so low. In the Philippines the charge was 34.8, including a seven-cent gasoline tax; in South Africa it was 40 cents, in Persia 51 cents, in Australia 58 cents, Columbia 60 cents, including a six-cent tax, and in LaPaz, Bolivia, the charge was 64.8 per gallon."

Miss Gertrude Pope, of Washington and Wood streets, was an overnight guest Friday at the home of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Comfort, of White Horse, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. W. Tracy and family, of Radcliffe street, left Saturday for Lake Dunmore, Vermont, where they will spend the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Derham have returned from their honeymoon trip spent through the Pocomos and Lake George, and have moved to their home in Oak Lane. Mrs. Derham was formerly Miss Anne Amole, of Edgely.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey L. Danfield and Mrs. C. Goslin, of 629 Beaver street, and Mrs. Jennie Burton, of Fallsington, left today for Ocean City, where they will spend several days as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Goslin at their apartment.

JUNE IS BANNER MONTH IN COUNTY LICENSE BUREAU

One Hundred and Eighty-Six Couples Applied for Permits to Wed

BRISTOL LED COUNTY

Eighteen Applicants Came
From Here and Thirteen
From Doylestown

DOYLESTOWN, July 1.—While Philadelphia complains of a falling off of marriage licenses during June, Bucks county steps to the front with Dan Cupid and breaks all known records for June. And incidentally seventy-five of the applicants come from Philadelphia.

"I do not know whether it is courteous treatment they receive in Bucks county or not," said Deputy Clerk Jacob Sholly yesterday, "but I do know that one couple complained they went to City Hall in Philly to get a license and they had to wait in line a long time and got disgusted and came out here to Doylestown."

During the month of June there were 186 couples granted marriage licenses in Bucks county. Out of that lot, 67 per cent of the applicants were non-residents of Bucks county. They came from eight states and the District of Columbia to get licenses here.

The city of Trenton furnished eighty applicants and a lot more came from other towns and cities in New Jersey.

"Hard times do not seem to lessen the number of licenses granted in Bucks county," the deputy clerk declared yesterday after flinging up the record for the merry month of June. "For the first six months this year we are 134 licenses ahead of any previous year in the county. The total during the first six months is 671 couples."

The docket does reveal the fact that among those securing licenses are mostly persons with professions or trades that pay salaries on which it is possible to get married and live comfortably. Fifteen school teachers were among the lot. Twenty hosiery mill workers received licenses. There were eight trained nurses left before "the big bow and arrow boy," Dan Cupid.

Telephone operators granted licenses in June numbered twelve while the farming industry was represented by a lonely four applicants.

Twenty-four of the male applicants and twenty of the female applicants had been married before. The youngest applicant was a girl of fifteen who received a license to marry a boy of twenty. The veteran of the applicants was a man of seventy-four who took his second license to marry a woman of fifty-seven who had been married twice before.

Fourteen divorced men and nine divorced women were granted licenses.

All but 80 out of the 186 female applicants had occupations other than housework.

Only six male applicants were under twenty-one. The large majority of applicants ranged in ages between twenty-one and forty.

Bristol led Bucks county with eighteen applicants, Doylestown was second with thirteen and Quakertown came third with ten. Not a single applicant came from Yardley. Morrisville produced five applicants and so did Perkasio, while Sellersville and Newtown each had three applicants and New Hope two.

The applicants came from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Massachusetts, Ohio, Illinois, Virginia and District of Columbia.

Ages of the applicants grouped is as follows:

REPRISALS

Americans need not take too seriously the current talk of foreign tariffs of reprisal for the Hawley-Smoot tariff. While there is doubtless some resentment abroad and reprisal tariffs are not unknown, there are forces at work which will discourage a general embargo, in the form of duties, on American goods at foreign ports.

Chief among these influences is Europe's heavy investment in American enterprises. Foreign funds invested in the United States increased over $400,000,000 last year, and foreign trading on American exchanges last year totaled over four billion dollars.

England is the principal investor in the United States with something over a billion and a half; Canada is second with nearly a billion. Netherlands, Germany and France follow with about $400,000,000 each. The rest of the world draws upwards of $300,000,000 of its income from the United States.

Will these foreign powers jeopardize such tremendous investments merely out of a spirit of revenge? They might go to such extremes if the American tariff boost completely dams the flood of imports, but that is something no tariff has even approximated.

The world has learned by experience that when the great population of the United States is most generally employed, is best paid, is enjoying the highest prosperity, then it is the most liberal spender in foreign markets and the most generous investor in foreign enterprise. And such are the ends sought by the Hawley-Smoot tariff.

DEFECTIVES

There are reasons, humane, social and economic, why the general public should give its support to the efforts, governmental and charitable, to provide treatment and schooling for the mentally defective.

These unfortunates live under an enduring handicap and are frequently the prey of the unscrupulous. The state, if it would live up to its responsibilities, must give them attention. Untrained and unschooled, they are not only a drag on the body politic; they are a positive menace. With adequate schooling and training, many of them attain self-respect and become self-supporting.

For society the cheapest and most satisfying way out is to provide institutional care for mentally defective children. The cost of training them for economic independence is much less than supporting them for life.

Another phase of the problem that is too often overlooked until too late is the large number of these mental cases which develop into the violent stage through neglect and too great freedom of action. New York's maniac killer probably is such a case. A number of them have come to light in recent times through atrocious crimes.

Salvage as many of these mental wrecks as possible and restrain the rest. That is the state's duty.

When a New York residence took fire 643 manuscripts submitted in a poetry contest were destroyed. No doubt everything of value was saved.

SYNOPSIS

Though fair of skin, Dawn, mystery girl of the African tribe in the British East African Protectorate believes she is black. Tom Allen, young plantation owner, loves her. He overhears secret of her Caucasian birth. Dawn is being consecrated as mystic bride of the local black god. She, bullying whipman, has concocted false story about Tom violating the sanctuary of the god, and surprising Dawn in vigil. Captain Eric, German commander of the British secret territory, orders Tom to England. She plans to attack Dawn next day in the temple.

INSTALLMENT TWENTY

"You seems to be worshipping a little yourself tonight," he observed. She bestowed a haughty glance upon him, such as a goddess might be presumed to bestow, and continued down the trail. But he stepped in front of her.

"You can't scare me 'cause you lives in de temple," he assured her. "I ain't even 'fraid of Malungu. I've got no more use for dis religion of de niggers dan you has, so don't expect to be high and mighty wid me."

"Let me pass," demanded Dawn. "First I wants to talk wid you," countered Shep. "I've got some news about yo' white lover."

"Tom?" cried Dawn involuntarily. "It didn't take you long to guess," commented Shep shrewdly. "How did you know I meant him? But you an't never goin' to see him no more."

She refused to give Shep further satisfaction by betraying any interest in Tom. She again made as if to proceed, but again she was blocked by him.

"He's on the boat for England," Shep went on, "an' when he gets back he's goin' to travel some more. Dey heard down at de canteen dat everybody in England has got to go to war. Dey is sending dem all to France. Tom won't no more dan get off de boat dan dey'll put him on another. Dey'll do dat," added Shep significantly, "if he ever gets back to England."

"Is there danger that he won't?" asked Dawn with quick concern. "De water day is sailin' through is full of submarines," said Shep. "Dat's the kind of a boat dat goes under water and explodes de other boats. De Germans has sent lots of dem boats right down here on de coast of Africa."

His words terrified her. She was no longer able to mask her feelings. In an agitated voice she requested that she be allowed to return to temple. Shep stepped aside.

"You better get back dere," he said, "cause you ain't goin' to be dere much longer."

She paused and turned inquiring eyes on him.

"Maybe I've goin' to take you out o' dere," he added. "Down at de German headquarters dey's gettin' worried. Captain Eric can't get no more soldiers for Germany and de English is sendin' all dere men to France and we can have our jungles back again."

Dawn bore down on him wildly. "The people of Malungu won't fight against the whites," she declared. "They will listen to their Thabu, and I won't let them burn and kill. I will tell them that Malungu forbids it."

"Dey knows Shep Keyes can do more dan Malungu," he returned unperturbed. "Since you been Thabu Malungu ain't been good to dese niggers. An' if I tells dem dey is making dere prayers to a white woman dey will burn you on de Hill of Skulls."

"White woman? I?" The shock of his announcement made faint. "Sure you is. I knows it an' Mooda knows I knows it," Shep told her. "An' when dey hears it dey will understand why you likes dis white snake Tom Allen. But," he concluded, "dere ain't comin' round here no more, and when I take back de settlement, I've goin' to let you be Thabu. But you an' goin' to be Shep Keyes' Thabu, not Malungu's."

After crossing the canyon near the field of the Tree of the Black God, Tom Allen abandoned all plans for an immediate rescue of Dawn and turned his thoughts to his new life. He quickly resigned himself to the fate returning him to England. At home he would immediately offer himself for war service. He was unusually well fitted for military duty. A graduate of a military college, he would have no trouble in winning a commission, but it was his determination to enter the ranks to save all possible time.

As the other joyful prisoners roared lyrically on the remoteness of Tipperary, Tom and Anzac talked. Anzac, who had found it difficult to subdue his own joy to give sympathy to Tom, now was cheered to observe him in better spirits.

"Old England," he began tentatively, "here's the place eh, Tom?" "The most glorious in the world," Tom agreed heartily. "It's a pity I'm not going to see more of it this time."

"You'll see it plenty," the Australian predicted.

"No," Tom returned, "on the day of my arrival I'm going to present myself to a recruiting office. I want to see the war."

"What's this we've been having," demanded the astonished Anzac. "Derby Day?"

"Don't you want to fight for your Motherland?" Tom asked with mock severity.

Anzac was disturbed to have his patriotism questioned. "Sure I do," he insisted, "but I want to see a little more of these lands I'm fightin' for. I'm a good loyal Australian, but you can't have much allegiance to the crown when you think that this hell hole is part of its colonies—or was till the Germans grabbed it."

"When you get to London," promised Tom, "the British spirit will take hold of you again. Mark me, you'll be bursting into a recruiting office before you know what you're about."

"Maybe," conceded Anzac, "but that'll be because I'm full of stout. All I want is a few visits to the pubs. If I can get a few sassy reprimands from some barmads I used to know, I'll probably run off to war to be safe."

"Sure," agreed Tom, "I'll see you in Flanders."

The ten Englishmen found the German commandant at Tabera a courteous fellow, solicitous of their comfort and anxious for news of Eric's command. Tom, who acted as spokesman, begged as a subject of Great Britain to be excused from carrying messages calculated to aid the military strength of the enemy.

Moreover, he told the commandant, "Captain Eric and I were peace time friends and as my captor he accorded me every possible kindness. I should feel that I was speaking disparagingly of my host were I to make any report of conditions of the garrison."

"From that I take it," observed the commandant, with a shrewd gleam in his eye, "that Captain Eric's command is not as secure as we might wish."

"You are privileged, sir," Tom admitted. "To find what meaning you are pleased to find in my words."

"Very well, Allen," said the German, "when I see Eric I'll tell him he made a good friend of an Englishman."

"Thank you," replied Tom, "such an assurance to him would please me beyond description."

"And when you arrive in London," said the commandant smiling, "see if you can persuade your Parliament that we Germans have some nice fellows on our side, too."

"I won't see many Parliamentarians," explained Tom, also smiling, "as I plan to spend most of my time in France."

"Not, I hope," returned the German, "as my war-time host."

"It would please me more, sir," said Tom, "to act as your official host right here at Tabera."

"A not impossible pleasure," admitted the German. "Fortunes of war, you know."

"Exactly, sir."

When the prisoners, freshly provisioned and provided with trail maps, pressed on to the seaport, Tom was ragged for threatening to displace the German commandant of the town.

"What did you hope for," asked one, "an attack by us ten?" "Why not?" asked Tom humorously. "You're all good Englishmen and fond of fighting, aren't you?"

"And nothing but shade!" "And Shep Keyes in jail!"

"Shep Keyes? Abhhhh! That's who Tom wants to get!"

BOOZE DOES IT

He was drunk on bootleg gin, say the apologists for a recent murderer. Bootleg stuff, they assert, will transform a man into a burglar, a rapist, a killer, when "good" liquor would merely make him good-naturedly drunk.

On that subject the surgeon-general of the United States Navy, Rear-

Admiral Charles E. Riggs, while attending the clinical congress of the American College of Surgeons in Chicago, spoke a few words to the point.

"The quality of the stuff consumed is relatively unimportant. There is not much difference between good whisky and bad whisky, real gin or the synthetic variety. All alcohol has the effect of instability upon any mind at all disposed to the commission of a crime. Alcohol certainly blunts the sensibilities, releases normal inhibitions and inclines the individual toward the commission of criminal acts of which, in all probability, he would not, under more favorable conditions, become guilty."

That's not pleasant doctrine for those who forget the days of the saloon and blame the results of alcohol on everything else but alcohol.

The incidental ingredients of synthetic booze may be poisonous—some of them are virulently so—but without the alcohol they would produce no more crime than so much concentrated lye.—N. W. Christian Advocate.—(Adv.)

Pittsburgh Resident Relates How New Medicine Proved To Be Exactly What He Needed

MR. MARK P. LOVETT

What mightier recommendation can a medicine have than the grateful, sincere and enthusiastic endorsement and praise of those who know what Konjola has done and can do? Give thought to the words of Mr. Mark P. Lovett, 40 East Roseridge Avenue, Bellevue, Pittsburgh, who says:

"I was generally run down in health; weak, tired and worn out each morning. Gas and bloating followed meals, and I had headaches and dizzy spells. I spent hundreds of dollars seeking relief. I paid as high as fifty dollars for examinations. Then Konjola was recommended. Konjola surely made good. Every morning I am refreshed, ready for the day's work. Gas and bloating have disappeared; my food digests properly; bowels are in fine condition and headaches are less frequent. It is worth a lot to get such relief, and I cheerfully endorse Konjola, the medicine that gave it to me."

Konjola cleanses and stimulates the ailing organs and rids the system of poisons. Then, and only then, is there room for health.

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

WANTS BRISTOL ADDED TO PHILA. CITY AREA

Realtor Proposes Absorption of Communities From Here to Chester

CENSUS DROP FEARED

A move has been started to extend the city limits of Philadelphia as far as Bristol but so far as can be learned at this time, the movement is not meeting with widespread support.

Jesse Jay Schamberg, a Philadelphia real estate broker in a communication addressed to a Philadelphia newspaper writes as follows:

"Philadelphia ought to take steps to bring about annexation of all surrounding communities, from Bristol to Chester and from Devon to the Delaware River," says Schamberg, in an open letter which he made public yesterday.

Such annexations would safeguard Philadelphia's retention of third place in population among American cities, points out Mr. Schamberg. He warns that the recent rate of growth of Delaware is the rate of growth of Philadelphia and that the rate of growth of Delaware is the rate of growth of Philadelphia.

Mr. Schamberg will press his proposal upon the attention of the Chamber of Commerce, the Philadelphia Business Progress Association and Mayor Mackey, on the latter's return from Europe this week.

The letter which Mr. Schamberg has addressed to the Public Ledger on this subject follows:

"The newspapers of Philadelphia published an article recently in reference to the census of Philadelphia, stating that the population was less than it was ten years ago. It further developed the idea that Philadelphia should attempt to bring into its city the entire area bounded by Bristol on the north, Chester on the south, Devon on the west and by the Delaware River on the east making this "Metropolitan Philadelphia."

"Of course this suburban development, and the great growth outside of the County of Philadelphia are largely attributable to the use of the automobile. With the advent of the airplane, this growth will increase daily, since persons will be able within a very few years to use a plane from their homes to an airport in close proximity to the center of the city, and while Philadelphians may smile at this suggestion, the time will come when it will become a matter of common usage.

"The Philadelphia Business Progress Association succeeded in raising $1,350,000 for the advertising of Philadelphia, and this money, in my opinion, will be wasted if on top of this advertising comes news items from the Philadelphia papers and elsewhere that Philadelphia is slipping back in population and that people are thinking about other cities than ours in which to carry on their business and live.

"I do not know of a greater contributing cause to harm this city than to have it known throughout the United States that Philadelphia is slipping, and I believe that the only way to say to the world that we are advancing is to quickly develop "Metropolitan Philadelphia" into a city of broader area and much increased population, along the lines that Los Angeles has followed. That city has taken all the suburbs and townships within a radius of twenty miles down to the sea. Together with this, there is needed, much more than in any place I know of, the co-operation of the citizens themselves to boost instead of knock, and not to permit this city to be ridiculed by non-residents.

"We are facing a situation that will strike a more vital blow to the business section of Philadelphia than anything that has heretofore been brought to the attention of large industries and most of the big businesses.

"Philadelphia, with its potentialities, should easily be the first industrial city of the United States, and we can ill afford to have it known that the population is decreased rather than increased, which will tend to remove us from third largest city in the United States to fourth or fifth.

"Two papers report this week that the census of Detroit shows an increase of 57 per cent in the last ten years, the population now being in excess of 1,500,000. There is every indication that unless Philadelphia takes cognizance of this fact and attempts to protect and develop its own interests that in the next decade Detroit will step into Philadelphia's place as the third largest city in the United States and Los Angeles the fourth, since that city has increased 50 per cent in the last ten years, which would put Philadelphia in the fifth place instead of third.

"Is Philadelphia prepared to sit idly by and allow this to happen?

"Real estate has suffered a very serious setback in the last two or three years. The turn has come in the last few months and there is indication of a real estate revival, but unless some drastic methods are pursued to develop Philadelphia into a position where it maintains its standing of City No. 3 in the United States we are headed for a situation which will reflect upon every man in business in this city."

In the letter the writer went on to cite that 50,000 persons had been lost to Philadelphia; 30,000 had been gained in West Philadelphia which left a total loss in ten years of 20,000 in population for the entire city.

"Of course it is rather obvious that the suburbs of Philadelphia have taken up a large part of this lost population, and to my way of thinking, it is a very serious notice to all Philadelphians, particularly those who are interested in its development and progress, to know that the city's population has decreased instead of increased during a period of ten years. If this publicity gains momentum in other cities than Philadelphia, it is bound to have a very deterrent effect upon development and growth in the next ten years.

"Having this in mind, may I suggest that your paper promote and encourage the idea."

President's Son Gets
Job in N. J. PlantStarts Vacation Work "At Bottom" in Radiator
Factory—Duties Indefinite.

ALLAN, PRESIDENT and HERBERT HOOVER, JR.

BAYONNE, N. J., July 1.—This summer will not be any joy-riding, snore for American college boys if they follow the example set them by Allan Hoover, younger son of the President of the United States.

Instead of taking a pleasure jaunt to Europe or spending the torrid months playing golf in some exclusive vacation resort, young Hoover, who just completed his first year in the Harvard Graduate School for Business Administration, has taken a summer job in the American Radiator Company plant.

This young man, whom any corporation in the country would welcome as an employee in almost any capacity, got his new job without influence and in applying for it asked to be started "at the bottom."

His work, which consists of studying accounts, typing notes, and adding long columns of figures, is the same as would be assigned to any unknown college student who applied at the plant.

Allan's salary is a secret between him and the company. His first day of work was hampered by the rush of newspaper reporters and photographers and also by the interest aroused in him among the feminine employees, but after the first flurry of excitement young Hoover settled down to labor in earnest.

"I got the job myself," he told inquirers proudly, "and I'm not being shown any favors because of my father."

Allan is a good-looking, affable lad, with steady blue eyes that occasionally flash with humor. He said he had no plans for his life work after he completed his postgraduate course at Harvard.

Promptly at 8 o'clock each morning, the Executive's son arrives at his desk in the large offices of the company. At noon he eats his lunch out of a pasteboard box like the other young men and women.

A statement from the company announced the addition of Allan Hoover to the staff. It stated that there was nothing unusual or significant in the appointment, and added, "It runs in his family to become wisely self-supporting as early as possible."

During the summer, Allan will be given a bird's-eye view of the routine working of the entire plant. The first day on the job he was taken for a tour of the factory and shook the oil-greased hands of the workers.

"The President," he said, "made no comment on my choice of employment." But intimates of the President declare he is delighted at the independence and initiative displayed by his son.

Nearly 10,000 people jammed Forest Park, Chalfont, Saturday, when Philadelphia and suburban Sunday schools held their annual outings.

The Saturday crowd was the largest ever accommodated at the Chalfont amusement center, some estimates of the attendance ranging as high as 20,000.

Among the North Penn residents there was a large delegation from St. Luke's Reformed Sunday School, North Wales.

An all-around athletic program was staged for everyone from kids to granddads. John Komie, manager of the Forest Park, donated a large silver loving cup to Allegheny M. E. Church, winner of the events with a total of 31 points. Trinity M. E. finished second with 30 points, while Simpson M. E., totaling 28 points, took third. These three schools are from Philadelphia.

Thirty young folks ranging in age from sixteen to twenty-two, members of St. Gabriel's Church, Philadelphia, narrowly escaped serious injury or death Sunday night, when the bus in which they were returning to Philadelphia after a day of picnicking at Forest Park, Chalfont, crashed thru a stone guard wall on the Edison bridge.

The rear wheels of the truck caught in the wall. This prevented the bus from dropping thirty feet below into a creek. Had the bus moved another foot it would have made a terrible dive to the creek bottom below.

One at a time the frantic boys and girls carefully stepped from the door of the bus. The driver's side of the bus hung suspended in the air. Not a single occupant of the bus was hurt, but several of the girls suffered from shock.

Byrd Party's Boy Scout Comes Home a Man

REAR ADMIRAL BYRD

PENNSYLVANIA BOY SCOUTS WELCOME THEIR BROTHER SCOUT HOME. 10

ERIE, Pa., July 1.—Loaded with honors and universally praised by fellow-members of the Byrd Antarctic exploration party, Paul A. Siple, most famous boy scout in the world, is back home once more, and glad of it.

Twenty-one-year-old Paul was the scout chosen from hundreds of thousands to accompany the history-making two-year expedition to the bottom of the world.

According to Rear Admiral Byrd and his aids, none worked harder or with more good will and intelligence than the modest youth from the City of Erie.

Though he grew to stalwart manhood amid the frozen wastes near the South Pole, Paul proved he was the same unassuming lad who had sailed away on the Barkentine "City of New York," when asked on his return, what he wanted most in the world.

"Eats," he said unhesitatingly, "I wrote mother about it—two pages describing the pies, milk, vegetables, corn on the cob and ice cream I wanted her to prepare for me."

Needless to say his mother was on hand in New York to witness the mad welcome given the Byrd party when it triumphantly sailed up New York harbor. With her was her husband, C. L. Siple and 65 Boy Scouts from Erie. Tears streamed from Mrs. Siple's eyes as she saw her son for the first time in two years.

Paul was a freshman in Allegheny College, Pa., when he was picked as the most eligible Boy Scout between seventeen and twenty years of age to go on the hazardous adventure with Byrd.

While he was away in the Antarctic, Allegheny's president, Dr. James A. Beebe, radioed him the good news that in view of his admirable record a four-year scholarship covering all expenses awaited him on his return.

Now that Paul is home basking in the sun at Erie and been congratulated personally by President Hoover, Dan Beard and other celebrities, the most precious recollection of his exploit is the praise given him by Rear Admiral Byrd, himself, when he said, "Paul took up his work as a man among men, stood regular deck watches at sea and turned himself into an able seaman on a full-rigged vessel." Paul plans to make scouting his life work after completing his studies at Allegheny.
